Outskirts Press, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 234 x 155 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .One story rises above the rest of the voices that cry for recognition. It is the narrative of the most critical person in history. Yours. Does this sound grandiose? Pompous? Self-centered? The world continues to contract with a burgeoning population, competing Tweets and Facebook blurbs, and ongoing brutal and senseless acts of terror. It becomes increasingly difficult to find our voice and purpose among the relentless barrage of 24/7 noise. Our sense of purpose diminishes proportionately to the endless chatter. And yet, the wisest voices of the past come forward to remind us that each life has a unique purpose, which is never repeated throughout the long epochs of humanity. No one s life an accident, a throw of the dice. The opposite is true. They whisper to us, our life s tasks are vital. We instinctively know this as we pursue to the answer to the question, What am I supposed to do with my life? Throughout our days we periodically ask this question, knowing that its answer will yield the ultimate reason for being. Living: A Jewish Thought Each Day is the book that responds to the question with life affirming statements from the Bible, the first and second centuries in ancient Israel and Babylonia to medieval times. Case argues that every person can maximize his or her life s potential by using the sage aphorisms and counsel that have been handed down through generations and delivered in this book. Inside you will find simple, straightforward advice on such subjects dealing with how to deal with people, who are upsetting, overcoming personal fears, finding joy in a gray world, the limits of our power and...
